

Channel Museum

Channel Museum offers the perfect family outing on Sundays and Tuesdays between 11.00 and 3.00 pm. When you walk into the Channel Museum you are transported into the rich history and heritage of our region. For parents and older generations the exhibits will bring back memories of our past, and provoke interest and wonder for students.

The Channel Museum relocated to Margate in 2012 and provides the Margate community with a rich resource, without the need to travel out of town. Our research library is an ideal place to start family history, house/property history or events that occurred in our region years gone by.

Our current feature and community display covers the history of surfing in Tasmania. A must see for surfing enthusiasts.

Channel Café has recently opened in the Museum building offering great coffee, and delicious snacks, and is operated under new management by Rose and Joe. Come and sample their wares.

The Channel Museum is a great school holiday outing.
